JOSEPH PRYCE, far right, with his wife Patti, Will Williams, and Kevin Strom on The Land in 1992.

Rest in Peace, Joe Pryce

One of the National Alliance's most distinguished supporters and former staffers, Joseph D. Pryce, has died after a long illness.

A writer, poet, musician, and translator, he is the author of the collection of mystical poems, Mansions of Irkalla, translator of the German philosopher Klages in his Ludwig Klages: the Biocentric Worldview and his selected aphorisms, Cosmogonic Reflections.

Mr. Pryce was born in Brooklyn, New York where he studied for the Roman Catholic priesthood (Redemptorist Order), which he later abandoned for a more pagan lifestyle, and then attended Brooklyn College. His real education was through the eclectic experiences he embraced in the New York of the late 60s and early 70s — from rocking out in various venues to film noir binge watching in some of NYC's most historic theaters. In the early 70s he discovered fascism and met by accident an old German soldier, who asked him if this world they were living in is what was really wanted.

He said for himself, "I was a musician for many years and recorded several CDs, but literature has been my first love, especially poetry." At the time of his death, Mr. Pryce lived in Charlotte, North Carolina with his beloved wife, Patti, 30,000 books, and his dog and cat. Besides his wife, Mr. Pryce leaves behind his daughter Jennifer Faustine, son-in-law, Chris, and his grandchildren, Peyton and Avery.

Though every inch a realist, Joe Pryce had an essentially mystic, Cosmotheist view of our race and its leaders' place in the history of the Universe. Once, when warning against even the slightest incursion of Middle Eastern religiosity into National Alliance publications, he remarked, "Klages and Hitler had all the answers at their finger-tips: Why stray from the true prophets?"

During his last days in the hospital, the doctors asked him if he would like to speak with a priest. Joe's response was typically spirited: "Do not bring any religious person into the room!"

In 1992 he volunteered to live on The Land with Dr. Pierce and others and did so for several months, and helped to expand the National Vanguard Books catalogue to nearly twice its previous size, making new selections and helping Dr. Pierce write the copy for the book descriptions (which were quite an education in themselves).

Joe Pryce is best known among Alliance members for his stunningly beautiful music album, Call of the Blood, an incomparable and poetic expression of the Aryan spirit, done in an art-rock style. Joe had told Kevin Strom in recent years that he one day wanted to create a folk music album of new racialist songs, which he described with a smile as "something along the lines of Alfred Rosenberg with a guitar." Sadly, he was never able to complete that project.

When Dr. Revilo Oliver died in 1994, Joe stepped in and wrote a series of articles that ran for several years in George Dietz's Liberty Bell magazine, which had formerly been Dr. Oliver's main venue. We hope to republish some of those works on the National Vanguard Web site in the near future.

Joe's final request to us was that his ashes be scattered atop Pierce Point, the highest summit of The Land. He wanted to rest, he said, on lands of his own people. That will be done. Our race has lost a valiant soul and a true artist who will never be forgotten.

Fall Has Arrived on The Land

The leaves changed colors rapidly and are on the ground; night temperatures are falling below freezing. Packed leaves have been removed from our many buildings' gutters and our road culverts. Our STIHL chain saw, donated earlier this year, is getting a workout removing fallen trees from blocking our roads. By maintaining the work we did during the Spring and Summer, our workload next year will be reduced sufficiently for us to focus on building, not just repairing.

We are repairing as an organization also: repairing over a decade of poor leadership and mismanagement. Just as the cycle of life (birth, life, death, and rebirth) rules in Nature — the falling leaves will become part of the soil as they decay and feed new life; the wind knocking down trees which will become homes to fungi, insects, moss, and a sanctuary for small animals before finally becoming soil — so it is with our organization. We need current Alliance members to be as active as possible in recruiting new supporters — and telling former members that you know that we are back, reinvigorated and growing.

I attended the Stormfront summit in Tennessee earlier this month with three other West Virginia supporters. One of the speakers was long time pro-White attorney Sam Dickson who asked us if we were affiliated with any organization. I replied, "Yes, the National Alliance." Sam, who should know better, then asked, "Which faction?" as if there is more than one National Alliance. That's a nagging perception among some "movement" people, a result of the anti-Alliance lawsuits and negative gossip swirling around, and often planted, on the Internet. It's our job to set the record straight.

There were nearly 50 attendees, and it was great to rendezvous with several Alliance members and supporters among the crowd. Among the others, we met a couple who we considered potential Alliance material.

David Duke, who is running for the US Senate in Louisiana, was the keynote speaker and gave an excellent presentation. If Whites turn out to vote for Donald Trump in large numbers in Louisiana, Mr. Duke may become one of the two largest vote-getters in his Senate bid and qualify for a runoff in December. Duke is smeared a hundred times worse than even Trump is by the Jew-controlled media and his own Republican party, so his is an uphill battle.

I sensed that other White nationalists have been coming around to the Alliance's way of thinking. Our approach is revolutionary in nature. Not just because we wish to replace the regime in Washington, but because we want to serve the Creator's purpose and advance our people towards the stars and immortality. No other American organization has the same lofty, Nature-based goals. In order to reach these goals we need our members to make sacrifices. Your monthly dues are important but your active participation is important, too.

We are still fighting ridiculous legal battles against bitter former members who wish to disrupt and/or destroy what we are building. Helping with our legal expenses is critical. Because of this we are beginning to sell some of the renewable timber on our 360-acre mountain to stop the draining of our financial resources. Unlike the timbering done during the Gliebe era, we have our own equipment to selectively harvest trees and carefully drag them to the staging area so a truck and easily pick them up, minimizing the damage to the surrounding forest. And, by doing the heavy work ourselves like this, instead of using a logging company, we will enjoy much more of the profit from converting this valuable resource; we will only need to pay the haulers for mileage taking our logs to market. — David Pringle, Chief of Staff, West Virginia

Readership Steadily Increasing

Last month, our online newsmagazine, National Vanguard, (http://nationalvanguard.org/) reached a goal we'd set back in 2013 when we re-launched the National Alliance and American Dissident Voices: Over one million pages were served during that 30-day period, to some 162,000 readers and listeners, according to the internal counters on our Web servers.

Our own statistics are confirmed by the Web ranking firm SimilarWeb, which shows that we were already reaching well over 100,000 readers the month before we had our million-page month — and they also show us that National Vanguard's readership has now significantly surpassed that of the combined readership of both the American Jewish Committee and the Simon Wiesenthal Center, anti-White Jewish organizations with multi-million-dollar budgets and large staffs. We at the National Alliance operate mostly with the help of a small staff of volunteers and wildly underpaid leaders who sometimes don't know when — or if — their next paycheck is going to arrive. Congratulations to all of the workers and volunteers who made this success possible. Imagine what we could do if just one per cent. of those 162,000 readers became dues-paying members. Recruiters, get busy!

Correspondence

Dear Chairman Williams, I will be glad when all the traitors finally leave you alone. We have so much working against us as it is.

What humanity doesn't realize (because most are of a lower intellect) is that there are cosmic forces which will doom most of Earth's life again as has happened many times in the past. We just need to be the ones left with a strategy and systems in place to survive well and healthy! Take care, — W.S., Virginia

Dear National Alliance: I'm a former member of the National Alliance. I left The Alliance while Erich Gliebe was running the organization because I didn't like the direction he was taking it. I'm sure a lot of people here had similar experiences. It seems as if the organization is on the right track once again, and I find myself contemplating rejoining. The NA is the only organization whose philosophy I agree with 100%. I am looking for guidance, and in some ways, to be convinced to join (or not) again... Best, — D.J., New York (via WhiteBiocentrism.com forum)

Dear National Alliance: Check enclosed. I apologize for inconsistencies with my pledge payments. I have had heavy personal challenges with health and finances. I come from a good family and attended private schools all the way, but, alas, being the "black sheep" of the family (more like unruly sheep) hasn't served me so well.

I first discovered the National Alliance in 2003. It took me one year to overcome my inhibition. I asked myself, "What language would have convinced me to become more active sooner?" I have studied the anti-White brainwashing done to our people and have profiled the mind of the newly-approached. I've developed some ideas for quickly cutting through our people's programming, so perhaps my most valuable contribution to our organization may be ideas and strategies for expanding membership. —E.P., Massachusetts

Chairman Williams responds: From one tuned-in "unruly sheep" to another, we welcome suggestions on how to reach more of our people and get them activated faster. We get plenty of suggestions on how we can improve, but what's needed more is people to implement those ideas, not for them to expect the few of us unpaid volunteers to implement them when we are already overloaded with our essential duties. The first thing you, E.P., and you, D.J., can do is rejoin our Alliance, adding your strengths to ours once again.

Chairman Will: As you can see by the number of viewers here and at nationalvanguard.org, there are many read-and-do-nothing Whites out there. I meet plenty of them too, many really just want to complain to make themselves feel better. A shame that more of us do not take responsibility for our people's future. Maybe White Americans are just too fat and happy, or scared spitless, or intellectually and/or morally lazy. Whatever excuse these Whites come up with — one excuse is as good as another — their lack of urgency to prevent our racial annihilation and move us on a higher evolutionary path is shameful. I often wonder if 50 or 100 or a thousand years hence those Whites who have managed to survive these and future times will be better, qualitatively, compared to those irresponsible Whites who do nothing for our cause and simply aren't made of the stuff to survive these times. We Whites who grab the future know what we must do, and we are building the will power to make it happen — and will make the future as we see it for ourselves. We must, or perish. — J.M., Iowa (posting to WhiteBiocentrism.com forum)

Hello Chairman Williams: I first heard of the NA through a hit piece on TV regarding Dr. William Pierce using the Internet many years ago when the Internet and AOL were first becoming big in the mid-1990s. I would listen to Dr. Pierce's weekly Internet radio show. It's good to see you are back. I really like your ["Incredibly Stupid"] flyer with Donald Trump; what a deflection or ruse his campaign is. It reminds me of Reagan in the 1980s. Anyway, best of luck with the NA and I will donate again in the future as I can. — W.N., California

Dear National Alliance staff: Here's $25 for another 500 National Alliance business cards. — A.K., Nevada

Chairman Williams: Last week I had dinner at a local sports bar and grill. I had the ["They Hate Us"] flier that you sent with the September BULLETIN in my jacket pocket. After placing my order, I went to the restroom. There was a large cork board near there and on an impulse I tacked the flier to it. After returning to my booth, a group of White men (dressed in football jerseys) entered and sat near me. One went to the restroom and returned to the table with our flier in hand. I couldn't hear their conversation, but based on facial expressions and body language their reaction was positive. Who knows what will result from that one flier they took with them, but I was encouraged. Respectfully, — G.W., Virginia

Chairman Williams responds: A flier with such a positive message should evoke positive reactions among responsible Whites, even sports fans. We need thousands of our fliers placed around like that, or handed to our people face-to-face. Traditionally, our supporters doing just that has nearly always brought affirmative results. We have a dozen or so fliers here that can be copied and spread around: https://natall.com/fliers/ A.K.'s 1,000 National Alliance business cards will catch a lot of eyes. Everyone can do what he is doing. Be creative in spreading our material around.

Dear Chairman Williams: It gives me great pleasure and a feeling of 'doing something for my race' to support the National Alliance. I am 82 and was not aware until recently that our people's situation is so bad; Jews and Muslims run Australia. No Jew will ever tell me what I can do. To make this country White again will take support from other countries. The worst offenders are the state-run TV stations.

Age has its advantages. I migrated from Holland to Australia in 1956; I was 21. For people who realize what is going on and are too afraid to support you I have contempt only. I am now reading [Wilmot Robertson's] The Dispossessed Majority. Horrifying. I hope you can manage to convey the NA's vital message to young people; how important it is to do 99% of all things in your own culture. I wish you and everybody else the very best. Yours sincerely, — A.H., Australia

Legal Update

The West Virginia Circuit Court appeal of Chairman Williams' conviction for misdemeanor assault is docketed for 15 December. Williams filed a Civil Complaint there last month against his accuser, Garland Corse, asking that the Court order Corse to return the items she stole from our Alliance headquarters. She filed her usual 11-page double-talk Answer, characterized by some of the Pocahontas County powers that be as "crazy talk," without her mentioning once the stolen items — instead, rambling interminably about how "dangerous"

Chairman Williams is and repeating her tale of his alleged "attempted homicide" of her. Corse's request for a pre-trial hearing has been denied by the court and a hearing for the Civil Complaint will be scheduled soon, hopefully prior to the 15 December assault conviction appeal.

The attorney for the dishonorable NARRG (National Alliance Reform and Restoration Group) co-plaintiffs finally conceded after the eighth hearing in that matter on 7 October that their $2 million lawsuit against the National Alliance and Chairman Williams is over and that the National Alliance successfully prevailed.

NARRG lost, but the Alliance has had to pay tens of thousands of dollars in legal expenses to defend against the bogus lawsuit. Now the obdurate NARRG losers have announced their support of another lawsuit against the National Alliance and Chairman Williams, filed by former Alliance member John McLaughlin, who just happens to "employ" Garland Corse as his mastermind "Executive Administrative Assistant" and "Legal Liaison." It turns out that Corse and her docile, manipulated patron McLaughlin have been secretly working with NARRG as part of their bizarre and flagrantly illegal coup attempt for one year now, and Corse has also worked as an informant for the Southern Poverty Law Center.

McLaughlin vs. National Alliance is bound to fail, but essentially extends NARRG's Virginia lawsuit into December, at least, in a different Virginia county Circuit Court than NARRG's was heard — and therefore is costing the Alliance thousands of dollars more to properly defend.

It was interesting to discover recently that John McLaughlin was expelled from the National Alliance in 1992 by Dr. Pierce for his participation in a plot involving a pilfered mailing list of some Alliance members' addresses and approximately 1,000 National Vanguard Books (NVB) customer invoices. Those names and invoices were copied and stolen by another expelled Alliance member, McLaughlin's friend Lance Frickensmith, who had been hired as a staff member by Dr. Pierce in 1991. The stolen lists were used in a failed attempt to form a competing publication and mail-order book store, "War Eagle Books," which operated out of a P.O. box very near McLaughlin's Illinois home. In 2004, McLaughlin stated that he "didn't know" the lists were stolen and that he was sorry for his involvement, but the discovery of new documents has now called his claims into question.

Dr. Pierce described the incident, and Frickensmith, in a 1992 internal memo to Alliance cadre over the heading, "Stolen Alliance Names and Addresses":

> We had an urgent need for help and so were obliged to accept someone of lower quality than would have been preferable. By way of an excuse, we note that Frickensmith was a university graduate, had attained the rank of captain in the U.S. Army, and seemed at first glance to be a normal, healthy person. As it turned out he was both a hobbyist and a constitutional loser. There were enough clues to the former failing to have alerted us if we had not been in such urgent need of help, but the only initial evidence seen of the latter failing was his lack of any regular employment history outside of the Army.

Dr. Pierce continued describing the theft and plot:

> McLaughlin is the front man: a former Alliance member, he was not bright enough to keep the publication going... It is unfortunate that the Alliance does not have the means at this time to punish [thieves]. Ultimately, of course, we must develop the means to discourage people from even thinking such things. About all we can do now to prevent damage of this sort is continue improving both security and the quality of personnel in the National Office. More important, we must continue growing as fast as we can, so that if a portion of our mailing list is ever stolen again, we will have made it a much smaller portion before anyone has time to make much use of it.

John McLaughlin is no brighter today than he was 25 years ago, though he claims to have several university degrees. He was used by Frickensmith then as a "front man" just like he is being used again today by Garland Corse and the NARRG attorney as plaintiff in McLaughlin vs. National Alliance.

McLaughlin's lawsuit against the National Alliance was crafted by his titular employee, "Legal Liaison" Garland Corse, assisted by the losing NARRG attorney. It is full of preposterous lies and misrepresentations and is bound to fail. This time, we intend that McLaughlin and his "employee" will be held fully liable for their wrongdoing.

Commentary by Chairman William White Williams

Can You Rise to the Challenge?

October 24 marked the second anniversary of my being appointed National Alliance Chairman by the board of directors. It has been much more of a challenging undertaking than I'd ever imagined it would be. I didn't seek the job, but when asked to rise to the challenge, I stepped into the breach.

Our organization has been under constant attack, not just from the anti-White Jews and queers of the SPLC — that was expected — but also by supposed "White loyalists" suing us, and hostile West Virginia neighbors trying their best to put me and Kevin Strom and now, David Pringle, in prison. We have persevered despite the constant attacks and are still standing tall.

We need to have more, many more, dues-paying members and supporters. I can't emphasize this enough. Lacking that, and lacking income from National Vanguard Books, we need some larger donations, mostly to our Legal Defense Fund, until all the legal challenges are behind us. If current supporters can simply pay ahead their dues, that will help tremendously.

When I took on the Chairman job, our organization had already lost all former Local Units and 98 per cent. of the members we had when Dr. Pierce died. My wife Svetlana has stood by me despite my putting all of our savings and the inheritance from my mother into saving the National Alliance. Kevin Strom and his fiancee Vanessa have sacrificed equally, as David Pringle and his fiancee Laura Lee are doing now, as they occupy and make improvements on The Land and the Alliance legacy Dr. Pierce left to us to build upon. We are all, effectively, unpaid volunteers. Being "land rich and cash poor," I have instructed Mr. Pringle to start slectively processing timber on The Land for sale so we can continue paying our bills as they come due, particularly our considerable legal expenses. He is concentrating on converting that resource as I write this.

Each member and supporter receiving this BULLETIN will notice the National Alliance Membership Survey that is enclosed. It is time we start seriously organizing our manpower and support. Every supporter is asked to fill out and return this confidential document to me before the end of November.

I know how to organize and use this vital information. When I served as Dr. Pierce's first Membership Coordinator in 1992-1993 he asked me to help him develop our first Membership Survey form. In a matter of a few months, serious Alliance-building took off, as the National Office staff grew from just Dr. Pierce and his wife to Kevin Strom, handling media; myself, the membership; Fred Streed, infrastructure; and Joe and Patti Pryce, National Vanguard Books. We had no Internet then, but we sure do have it now and need to know how to coordinate our volunteers, especially our younger members who have been raised from their cradles with computers, to make best use of it. Anyone with computer access can be of enormous assistance if only they will step up and put their skills to use. I started transcribing/digitizing old, pre-Internet National Vanguard magazine articles by Dr. Pierce four years ago and soon had other volunteers doing the same, so these valuable works by Dr. Pierce could be shared easily. Within a year Kevin Strom and I decided we would start a new National Alliance, with no idea that the original National Alliance that had by then had nearly been destroyed, and facing the $2 million NARRG lawsuit, would fall to us. I purchased Dr. Pierce's precious research library in early 2014 when I learned that my predecessor was trying to sell it to the highest bidder; then I purchased and moved another, even larger well-curated book collection that was stored in West Virginia to the nice, 3,300 square foot headquarters building I constructed for our new Alliance headquarters at my home here in Tennessee. Because I and Kevin and a couple of other former members were working so diligently (especially compared to the NARRG vultures) to carry on Dr. Pierce's vision, the board decided to offer the leadership of the Alliance to me.

"Can each of you bring one more White man or woman to our cause by this time next year?" That is the challenge National Alliance Media Director Kevin Alfred Strom proposed to American Dissident Voices listeners in the 15 October broadcast. Alliance members follow our ADV broadcasts, but very few of the tens of thousands of other listeners have stepped up to join our organization. It is to our responsible dues-paying members and supporters that I extend that challenge in this edition of the BULLETIN, our 22nd since the renewal began. Help us build. Bring others on board the team with the only program capable of achieving long-term White renewal and progress. W. W. W.
